Guidelines

Notices may include deceased’s name, age, address, day of death, visitation plans, funeral home in charge. No spouses, profession, or background information of any kind will be included. We will include parents’ names for an infant.

Rites may include deceased’s name, age, address, time, place and type of services, place of burial, visitation plans, time of viewing, and funeral home in charge. We do not include memorial contributions or ministers officiating. Rites run the day of services. We will include parents’ names for an infant.

Obituaries: The headline consists of the deceased’s name, which may include maiden name and/or nickname. The titles Dr., The Rev. and military titles can be added. Please indicate name preference.

The dateline is the city in which the deceased lived at the time of death. The only exception is when the deceased lived in a retirement home (or some comparable place) for a relatively short time. In that case, please note if the dateline should be somewhere other than the city of residence.

Listing of Death: The front page of the Metro includes a listing of deaths, which includes where the deceased resided at the time of death. The deathlist includes two names only, usually first and last. If the deceased was known by another name, this may be used. (Please indicate the name to be used if different from the first name.)

Please be advised that, when requesting donations, memorials may not be made to the family or individual, but to an institution of some type, only.

Second day obituaries, rerun by funeral home or family request qualify for a 50% off discount if the copy remains within an inch of the original.
